

Your event during the current Coronavirus and social distancing measures;

In this current, ever-changing social and health situation, a handful of clients are unfortunately being forced to completely cancel their events. However, I'm happy to report that the vast majority of clients have been able to reschedule, meaning we can still supply them with live entertainment. I've been in contact with our legal representatives, Musicians Union, to make sure any decisions we make are fair to both our clients and the full-time musicians in the band.

In the event of a complete cancellation:

Under normal circumstances, if we have received a deposit and held a booking date in our diary for a month, we are able to retain 25% of our total fee in the event of a cancellation (as per our terms and conditions - ref; sections 3&4, including 'scale of charges'). However, the current Coronavirus situation means many event cancellations may soon fall into the legal classification of Force Majeure.

Cancellation due to Force Majeure

As per our Terms and Conditions:

2) "Force Majeure. In the event of the Performance having to be cancelled due to circumstances beyond the control of either "The Hirer" or "The Supplier", then neither party will have responsibility to the other for any loss suffered thereby. For the avoidance of doubt, no fee will be payable by either party in respect of performances cancelled by force majeure."

As stated above, neither party are responsible to the other for any loss. Outstanding balances from "The Hirer" will no longer be due or refunds owed by "The Supplier".

Rescheduling due to the Coronavirus pandemic

As full-time suppliers of live entertainment, we will always opt to first investigate how we can prevent our clients from losing deposits or sums already paid to us. We very much appreciate our client base for their frequently returning custom and support, and will always aim to help and assist where we can.

If a client requires to postpone their event at this difficult time, we'll happily aim to reschedule for the same fee, based on the same booking requirements as before. As long as we are available on your new date, it's within 12 months of the original event date and is still held in the same county, we can update your booking invoice and carry over your deposit/sums paid.

What to do now?

As previously mentioned, we always aim to help and assist. Please do continue to keep in touch with us regarding the progress of your event and we will endeavour to do all we can to keep supplying you with a high-quality, professional live entertainment service.

Best wishes,

Tommy Lewis
